

CALL FOR PAPERS FOR GJSD

ISSN 2732-3781

Submission open

The GiLE Journal of Skills Development (GJSD) invites authors to submit research articles and other forms of output for its next issue. GJSD \(gjsd.gile-edu.org\) is an open-access, double-blind peer-reviewed, international scientific journal on 'Personal skills' development for the 21st Century, published by the GiLE Foundation \(www.gile-edu.org\) and indexed by CrossRef and Google Scholar (ISSN 2732-3781, DOI prefix 10.52398).

No submission fee (APC) is required, and all articles are available free-of-charge upon online publication on the GJSD website (CC BY 4.0).

GJSD offers a publication opportunity to both experienced and relatively new researchers interested in the field of Personal skills development for young people. It also offers a platform for professionals to share their views to a wider audience drawn from both academia and industry. 'Personal' or 'transferable' skills are crucial to lifelong employability. An adaptable and resilient workforce and society will increasingly need these skills. GJSD therefore aims to be a valuable, open-access resource for all those who aim to equip young people for a future involving ongoing skills development, upskilling and reskilling.

This includes personal and interpersonal skills, digital skills, media literacy skills, adaptability and change management, emotional intelligence, empathy, innovation and creativity skills, complex problem-solving skills, communication skills, stress and anxiety management, leadership skills and effective decision making. GJSD accepts all types of research output, e.g., research reports, literature reviews, book reviews, Food for Thought articles or Policy and Social Challenges articles, etc.

For submission, please familiarise yourself with the Journal's Aims & Scope and the Guide for Authors, and submit your research paper through the website platform at gjsd.gile-edu.org.
